3.1. Broad direction should be given, but it should be left to the market to identify solutions, otherwise you risk hindering innovation. Solutions need to be found for specific product groups.

3.2. Emphasis on reducing environmental impacts and encouraging innovation. Once again, you need to consider the global level not just the EU level. Measures should not be used to erect barriers and further protectionism. Economic aspects need to be taken into account. In terms of durability, you also have to consider consumers and their behaviour.
